BALKAN ALLIES BEATING TURKISH ARMY BACK

MANEUVERING ARMIES IN HARD BATTLE AGAIN NEW PHASE CHARGING BLUES RAKED BY ARTILLERY FIRE INVOLVED IN NOMINATIONS

Reds Successful In Getting Strong Position

BY LAURENCE REDINGTON
[Star-Bulletin Staff Correspondent with the Red army]
HEADQUARTERS NORTHERN DETACHMENT, In Camp Near Schofield Barracks, October 23, 1 p. m.—This was a Red battle-day for Oahu. The Northern invaders, commanded by Capt. George K. McGunagle fell back at daylight from their temporary camp at Schofield Barracks to a splendid defensive position north of the Kaula gulch, and repulsed the Blue attack with heavy loss to the latter army.

At 11:30 when the action ceased, there was no doubt as to which side was successful. The Red loss was considerable, according to the umpires.

Today was a wonderfully clear day, the sky having been swept clean by the rains, and as the action took place on the plains, the panorama of battle was spread out before the observers in commanding positions so completely that practically all the detail of action could be followed, and picturesque the action was.

With their plan of procedure received in the special situation given out last night, the Red Army marched out of camp at 6 o'clock this morning, the cavalry and artillery going by road and the infantry going by trails leading through the gulches and over the higher ground.

The Reds were given an hour's time to take up the defensive position called for in the special situation, but so smartly did they do their work that they arrived at the defensive point well ahead of the appointed time. Their position was taken up on the summit of a knoll directly north of the post, a strong natural position, with a gulch on one side and open fields on the other.

The Reds were disposed as follows: D troop and part of A troop of the cavalry were on the left flank, sent out to reconnoiter. C, B and part of A troops were in the left rear as reserves. Six companies of infantry were on the firing line with two companies of infantry as the local support. One battalion was held in reserve.

The troops took up their line position on the military crest of the knoll. The first view of the hostile Blue troops was caught at 7:55 o'clock and at 8:55 the Red and Blue cavalry left flank between Red and Blue cavalry. At 9:15 o'clock the Red artillery opened on both Blue infantry and Blue cavalry, which was advancing right in the road and was under heavy play from the guns.

The Blues started a feint attack on the Red left flank and then gradually developed their attack on the battle front. The Blues suffered heavy cavalry losses. Two troops of the Blue cavalry under Capt. Orton crossed the gulch and tried to pass on the right of the Reds but such a hot fire was poured on them from the artillery that the umpire ruled that fifty per cent were killed and one troop accordingly was forced to return. The Red artillery had plenty of chance to play upon the cavalry and the umpire said the artillery did effective work.

At 11:30 the firing ceased and both armies returned to their camps of last night. The forces did not break camp today, but left for their maneuvers then returned.

NEW PROBLEM GIVEN TO ARMIES RESULTS IN SECOND BATTLE

The war problem worked out by the maneuvering armies today, which resulted in the "Battle of Kaula," is given in the following notification that the umpires sent to the two commanders, in the form of a "special situation" for each army.

Special Situation Of The Blues.
The results of the engagement of October 22 on the United States military reservation, were indecisive. The Blues held Kokoia Hill and the Reds confronted them.

At daylight October 23 the Blue commander discovered that the Reds had withdrawn toward Kawaihapa. At the same hour the patrols reported that the landing operations at Kawaihapa had ceased. The Blue commander decides to pursue the enemy at once.

Special Situation Of The Reds.
The results of the engagement on October 22, on the United States military reservation, were indecisive. The Blues held Kokoia Hill, and the Reds rested on their arms prepared to resume the attack at daylight, at which time reinforcements were expected to arrive.

At 5 p. m. October 22 the Red commander received the following message by field wire:
"It is believed that all the important Blue mobile force of Oahu are in your immediate front. The rough water and the explosion of several submarine mines have seriously interfered with the further disembarkation of our troops at Kawaihapa."

"Fall back with your command before daylight tomorrow and take up a defensive position between Kaula and Kawaihapa, covering the 101-105 road, (Schofield Barracks map)."

ORTON'S CAVALRY HAS HARD TIME OF IT

BY LAURENCE REDINGTON
[Star-Bulletin Staff Correspondent with the Red army]
HEADQUARTERS NORTHERN DETACHMENT, Oct. 22.—Home again!

The close of the first day's hostilities finds the Red and the Blue armies in camp on the Schofield Reservation, about a mile apart, the invaders being camped just east of the First Infantry's permanent camp, while the Blues are resting on their arms near the central maneuver station at Castner.

Both forces have been fighting over again the battle of Lellehu. Plain, contested this morning, and both, as is not unusual in maneuver problems, claim the victory. The Reds are strongly of the opinion that by crossing Kaula gulch without opposition, they obtained the commanding position, and were in shape to hold the Blues in check, while the latter have a dozen reasons for thinking that they have the edge on the situation. The umpires, who are the only ones whose opinion counts on the score, are saying nothing. However, tomorrow will be another battle day, and then several disputed points may be settled.

Marines Cut Figure.
The injection of the marines into the war proved even more of a surprise than was anticipated by the department strategists, and when Captain Cutts' command arrived after a strenuous hike from Haleiwa, and went into camp with the Red army, they were greeted with considerable enthusiasm by the soldiers. Their mission was to cover the left flank of the Red column on its march from Kawaihapa to Schofield, and so successfully did they accomplish this that the squadron of Blue Cavalry, supposed yesterday morning to be patrolling the northwest coast, never

WITH THE BLUE ARMY IN THE FIELD, KOKOLEA HILL, Oct. 23, 12:30 p. m.—At noon today the results of the second battle between the rival Reds and Blues are indecisive, as were the results of the first day, but the Blue commander and his officers have no reason to feel other than elated over the

SUPERVISORS HURRY FOR STREET AUTO ORDINANCE

Pass First Reading, but Will Grant Public Hearing on Thursday Night

Last night the Board of Supervisors passed the Fort street automobile ordinance on first reading, rejecting a suggestion that a public hearing should first be held on the measure. In fact Supervisor McClellan, the member that had even moved for the hearing, seconded the motion for first reading of the bill immediately afterward, only withdrawing his own motion when Mayor Fern gently asked him if such was his intention in seconding the opposing motion.

About the only other lively incident of the meeting was an eloquent plea on behalf of attention to the streets bounding Emma Square, made by E. L. Schwartzberg when Murray stated that the thoroughfares in question were really among the finest in condition in the city. The citizen would have caused keen regret to the engineers of the "business men's ticket," had they heard him on this occasion, for allowing his name to be dropped from the inventory of supervisory timber prior to the Republican convention, so ably did he handle his subject.

Contention Between Parties.
No decision was registered regarding the contention between the Republican and Democratic organizations over the occupancy of Aala

Dance Hall Ordinance.
Mrs. Anna C. Cole, president of the Humane Society, wrote to thank the board for its kindness in giving so much time to the dance hall ordinance, also for allowing the society to appoint the three inspectors under the ordinance, which would be done at its meeting on October 23.

Bacillo M. Macalino applied for a dancing hall license at 331 Queen street, in a building owned by Kapala Hallaka, Kalaupapa, Molokai, and the clerk was directed to issue it.

The Hawaii Glee Club was granted a permit for a dance in K. of P. hall on the 26th inst., for the purpose of raising a standard fund for the club. Pio Shop License Revoked.

SMITH GOES TO HILO TO CONFER WITH HOMESTEADERS

The homesteaders on Hawaii who have failed thus far to make good on their lands will be given an opportunity, within the next few days, to say whether they desire to continue living on the tracts and prove up, or to sell their rights so that they may recover the money they have expended in improving them.

Assistant Attorney General Arthur G. Smith left this morning for Hilo, where he expects to meet some of these homesteaders personally, and to authorize Attorney Harry Irwin to interview those Smith may not be able to visit. The homesteaders whose affairs are to be taken up and adjusted at once reside on the Kaiwili and Opea-pelea tracts. An attempt is to be made to find out just how many desire to remain on the land, with additional time given them in which to make good.

Smith will also take up in Circuit Court the ejectment suit brought against Lucas, in which the Territory claims title to one and three-quarters acres of land. The government wants title to this land so that Front street may be widened at this point.
